

Receipt of Mail

Many readers are keenly interested in the length of time it takes for letters from prisoners of war to reach their families in the United States, and the suggestion has been made that, whenever a prisoner of war letter is sent for me in this BULLETIN, the recipient should note on it the date of receipt. If the dispatch and arrival dates are given, we shall be glad to show them for the benefit of readers in general.

Cartons for Next-of-Kin Parcels

As German and Japanese censor regulations do not permit printed matter of any kind to be included in next-of-kin parcels, it is preferable not to use a carton container with printing on it—such as are generally obtainable at the local grocery store. From time to time some ten-cent stores carry plain cartons of suitable size, and it is safer to use one without any printing on it. Experienced packers recommend a stout cloth wrapping around the carton inside the outer paper cover to which the label is glued. The cloth cover should be arranged so it can be easily removed and retied by the censors. One label should be on the outside and one on the inside of the package. It cannot be too strongly emphasized that next-of-kin parcels have a long and arduous road to travel and are subject to card a good deal. Last week I started to play table tennis. So you see I am getting healthier right along. I am envious of the men that play basketball and football but my hands are too tender for that yet. Last week the boys put on a horse race on the football field, using dice and wooden horses. I placed bets on three winners and my roommate had two winners. It was an enjoyable day. We even had a bar at the race track. But I don't like the German beer as well as what we have in the States. My regards to all. Write often as all we live for is the mail.

LETTERS

(Continued from page 8)

(This officer was severely burned in a crash when his plane was brought down over Greece. Ed.)

Stalag III B:
April 18, 1943

I am feeling fine and hope you and very rough handling, so they should be well packed and correctly addressed.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

The names and addresses of the nearest relatives of American prisoners of war and civilian internees, to whom this Bulletin is sent, were furnished to the Red Cross by the Prisoners of War Information Bureau of the Front Headquarters General's Office. To enable us to keep the mailing list up to date, we would request our readers to advise us of any change of address. Please inform your Red Cross chapter whenever you change your address and, in doing so, give the prisoner's name; his serial or service number; the name of the country in which he is held as well as the camp address (if known); and the name, and new and old address of his next of kin. In the case of civilian internees, please give the name of the interned community and camp (if known) in which he or she is held; and the name and new and old address of the next of kin.

See 542 P. L. & R.
U. S. POSTAGE
PAID
Washington, D. C.
Permit No. 54

Prisoners of War Bulletin

NOVEMBER, 1943

Published by

The American National Red Cross
Washington 13, D. C.

Return Postage Guaranteed

Postmaster—If addressee has received and new address is known, notify sender on FORM 3547, postage for which is guaranteed.

Serials Acquisition
University of Texas Library
Austin 12 Texas

THE UNIVERSITY
OF TEXAS
JAN 1 1944
THE LIBRARY

RISONERS OF WAR BULLETIN

Edited by the American National Red Cross for the Relatives of American Prisoners of War and Civilian Internees

1, NO. 7

WASHINGTON, D. C.

DECEMBER 1943

Christmas Cheer for War Prisoners

January 5, 1944

I have received four letters of which all were certainly censored. They were written in May and June of 1942. I also received a letter from D. L. and Bonnie, only permitted to write once this time so tell them hello for me. I am in best of health so do not worry about me. I will write every chance I get.

Regulations had to start last year in order to bring American prisoners of war in Europe a reminder from home that the thoughts and families would be with them during Christmas. This was necessary so there would be no doubt of special packages reaching the men before December 25. Prisoners were granted the American Red Cross discount for many articles before they could even be ordered. Then purchasing department had to find out places where they could buy, and obtain the special cans in which they were to be packed.

Supplies in Europe were used and assembled at the New Packaging Center. There, women worked during the summer days to pack the contents in specially decorated traditional red green Christmas cans. Each package contained, in addition to main standard items, the following: fruit cake, fruit candies, hard candy, nuts, assorted dried fruits, Christmas cards, handkerchiefs, and a game or puzzle (the latter supplied by the Junior Red Cross).

A generous margin for prisoners newly captured during North African operations was added to the number of parcels provided for those already reported, and early in September some 10,000 of these special Christmas packages for American prisoners in Europe, given by the United States government, were shipped from Philadelphia direct to Marseille, France.

It was impossible to make up special packages for all those United Nations prisoners to whom food packages sent to the Far East were specially made up to meet exceptional requirements. These Gripsholm supplies, which were transferred to a Japanese ship at Moromagao under International Red Cross Committee supervision, were unloaded during November at the designated points in the Far East. Assuming no undue delays have occurred, there has thus been ample time for the food, clothing, medicines, and other supplies to reach the men in the Far East camps by Christmas.

Two thousand of these special packages were shipped to Europe for distribution to American prisoners of Christmas.

Experiences of a Prisoner in World War I

By James Norman Hall*

One would like to give some comfort and encouragement to American parents or other relatives whose sons, husbands, fathers, or brothers may find themselves prisoners in German hands during the course of the present war. This is my purpose here by telling, briefly, something of my own experience as a prisoner during World War I, but it is necessary to say in advance that I do not know whether the Germans of Hitler's Reich may be compared with those of the last war. If the German attitude toward prisoners has not changed, then there is good reason for Americans to expect that those of their relatives who may have the hard luck to be captured will not be mistreated. I speak, of course, from a limited experience, concerned with two German war hospitals—at Jarny-Confam, in occupied France, and at Saarbrücken—and at three prison camps: Raat, Karlsruhe, and Landshut. I may have been lucky in the various places to which I was sent. However that may be, I felt that, in all of them, our treatment was as fair as prisoners of war who have the right to expect.

During the final summer of World War I, the food problem in Germany was a serious one. We prisoners were not, certainly, pampered in this respect, but the food we received was sufficient to maintain health. We could have survived upon it alone, had it been necessary. Thanks to the wonderfully efficient Prisoners of War Organization of the American Red Cross, functioning from Switzerland, we were not compelled to do this.

The moment the Prisoners of War Committee received, from Germany, lists of new prisoners taken—and this was, usually, very soon after the events—

*Mr. Hall, the noted author, sent this article to the PRISONERS OF WAR BULLETIN from Postscript, Talbot.

weekly parcels were sent on the way to these men—clothing, food, tobacco, toilet articles, etc.; everything, in fact, necessary for their health and comfort. With our Red Cross supplies, we prisoners lived better than many of the Germans guarding us. Of course, some of the food boxes sent to us were broken, and a part of their contents stolen by the Germans; but our estimate was that about ninety percent of the boxes reached us intact, a much higher percentage than any of us had expected. The Germany of World

Under the present careful system of receipts and control, the British Red Cross established that, during 1942, losses in transit were only 8.1% of one percent. Ed.

Group of American soldiers captured by Germany in World War I. Captain James Norman Hall is seated. He was shot down when a member of the Lafayette Escadrille, and was captured unescorted with both legs broken. Earlier he had served as a British Tommy. Standing, left to right, are: Lt. Charles H. Codman of Boston, Lt. Henry Carroll Lewis of Germantown, Pa., and Lt. Robert G. Bremerling of Minneapolis.

War II has looted the whole of Europe for food; therefore, it is to me likely that they will be less inclined to steal food than prisoners of war than the Germans of the last war when their own men were so very scarce.

German Concern for Prisoner Health

The German prison camps I experienced were kept thoroughly clean and sanitary, and situated in healthy localities. We had no complaint whatever to make concerning grounds of health. The Germans, in particular as we Americans know it, at least, so they were taught in the last war. As a matter of course, prudent prisoners living today, I would be willing to take my oath that he is a Nazi by compulsion. He was a real human being, compassionate, sincere, warm-hearted; there was not a trace of the Hun in him. I believe even under National Socialism, there must be some Germans left of the Dr. Jahn kind. If so, hope for the future of their country lies in them.

My longest stay as a prisoner was at a camp for American airmen at Landshut, Bavaria, where we were decently housed in the walls of an old castle on the hill overlooking the town. The Bavarian camp inspector was a decent fellow who, from time to time, bore complaints or suggestions we might make about our treatment. He was, I believe, genuinely concerned to do his best and to make us as comfortable as possible. He was never humiliatingly treated, and such privileges as we were entitled to in other famous grandiose German camps were bought for us—at expense, of course—of English books, so that we received short shrift for few days than it had up to long as it may seem; I left Germany after the war, in excellent health and weighing more than ever before; but the added weight was due, in large part, to the sufficiently praised candle and American Red Cross whose efforts for their welfare prisoners will never be forgotten.

Germans must realize by this time the game is up for them, if they realized it in the summer of 1944. Therefore my belief is that, the enormous weight of world suffering and misery already upon their shoulders, they will not add to the suffering to come on the day of victory by mistreating their prisoners.

TRANSFERS FROM ITALY

Word has been received from Geneva that about 300 of the approximately 1,000 American prisoners of war in Italian camps at the beginning of last September were transferred to Germany. Up to the middle of November, the International Red Cross Committee had not been advised of the names of the men transferred to the German camps to which these men had been assigned.

A few American prisoners in Italy succeeded in working their way southward and rejoining the United States Army after the announcement of the armistice with Italy. It will probably be some weeks before the new camp addresses of the American prisoners taken to Germany will be known.

Missing in Action

Prisoners of War Information Bureau of the Provost Marshal General's Office has recently received many letters from families of men reported "missing in action" asking for further news. An official of the Bureau states that families are notified just as soon as the Provost Marshal General's Office receives names of prisoners, and that it is not necessary to write for further information. Until a man is officially listed as a prisoner, his records are kept by The Adjutant General's office (if he is in the Army), or by the Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard. Accordingly, the Prisoners of War Information Bureau will have no record about him until he is actually listed as a prisoner of war.

However, if, as sometimes happens, the family of a missing man receives word from him showing that he is definitely in a prison camp, his letter or card should be sent to the Provost Marshal General's Office so that his record may be brought up to date. That office will make a photostatic copy of the letter or card and return the original to the family.

Prisoners of War Bulletin invites reprinting of its articles in whole or in part. Its contents are not copyrighted.

D. A. R. Aids Red Cross

Office space for the entire national headquarters staff of the Prisoners of War Relief section of the American Red Cross has been most graciously provided by the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The third floor of Memorial Continental Hall, the beautiful marble building on 17th Street, Washington, D. C., which is the national headquarters of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been turned over to this section for the duration. No rent is charged for the spacious quarters provided, and the Red Cross assumes only actual maintenance expenses.

The Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution has saved out priceless museum collections of old American furniture, rugs, china, and old home settings, storing them in other parts of the building to make room for the Red Cross workers and their office files and desks. Beautiful crystal chandeliers, grandfather clocks, and some rare paintings remain to remind the workers of the peaceful and dignified atmosphere they have invaded.

All those who have been sightseeing in Washington will surely remember the rooms in this building—each named for a particular state in the Union, and furnished as a memorial to that state by respective state chapters.

In taking this occasion to express our appreciation, we hope that the work done by this section will serve to demonstrate the gratitude of the American Red Cross to the Daughters of the American Revolution for their contribution to our common humanitarian effort.

Christmas Reminder for German Prisoners

Through the International Red Cross Committee the German Red Cross has sent about 500 tons of supplies to be distributed at Christmas to German prisoners of war in the United States. Each individual package contains cake, chocolate, nuts, raisins, preserves, sardines, candy, and cigarettes, with a greeting card and a sprig of green.

Notes on Prison Camps

Stalag Luft I

In the middle of July 1943, a Delegate of the International Red Cross Committee visited Stalag Luft I, situated about 75 miles northeast of Silesia and close to the Baltic coast line. At that time the camp contained a total of nearly 1,000 prisoners, of whom about 300 were American uncommissioned officers. All the prisoners in this camp were captured while serving with the RAF or the USAAF.

Sanitary conditions at Stalag Luft I were reported to be good—with adequate wash stands, latrines, and shower baths. The infirmary, located in a separate barrack, contained 20 beds in 4 rooms; 16 beds were occupied by slightly sick prisoners. None of the prisoners at Stalag Luft I was working at the time of the visit.

Barracks with rooms containing 24 beds each were occupied by American prisoners. The beds are double deckers with good mattresses. The rooms were stated to be clean, well lighted, well ventilated and heated. There is a camp theater and both indoor and outdoor sports are well organized. Protestant religious services were held, and efforts were being made to obtain the services of a Roman Catholic priest if necessary. German Red Cross food packages, clothing, and comfort articles were reaching the camp regularly, and larger shipments of food packages were requested so that an adequate reserve could be accumulated to meet the increased number of prisoners expected at Stalag Luft I. The food contained in Red Cross packages was cooked collectively on four stoves reserved for painters' use.

Correspondence was reported to be irregular, with mail from the United States taking as long as 7 or 8 months to reach prisoners. As has already been announced in this BULLETIN, all letters for American and British airmen in German camps is censored at Stalag Luft III, and should be addressed there. If the designation of the camp where the prisoner is actually held is other than Stalag Luft III, it should be added in brackets, for example—Stalag Luft II. This form of address is not to be used on packages; they should be addressed to the camp where the prisoner is actually held.

Stalag Luft III

The number of American and British airmen in Stalag Luft III seems to be growing steadily, with the result that the need of relief supplies, clothing, recreational equipment, etc., is also constantly increasing. A large shipment of clothing for American prisoners reached the camp in July so that the men's needs for the present winter should have been met.

Practically all the prisoners in this camp are young, and—according to a recent report from a neutral Y. M. C. A. secretary—they spend most of their time playing at one game or another. In consequence, sporting equipment wears out rapidly. American games, it is stated, are growing increasingly popular—especially football, baseball, and basketball, and a large amount of sporting equipment is now needed for American games. No separations between American and British airmen appear to have been made at Stalag Luft III, and they are reported to get along very well together.

Like the British, the Americans in this camp are said to be eager for the opportunity to take examinations, and are busily awaiting university and high school programs. "On the whole," the report concludes, "the Americans are rather well here, and I have not heard any complaints. They receive, in British, Red Cross parcels, which have also been appointed to over carefully selected areas. Each of these has his office and store room at the central Arbeitskommando in his care, or at the one nearest the railhead. In this way 250 or more of Arbeitskommandos are brought under close control. This control (of relief supplies) is now as near perfect as can be expected, and is due entirely to the cooperation and support of the present Commandant and his staff, who do everything possible to ensure that distribution is correctly and quickly carried out."

Stalag VIII B

A recent report stated that there were over 22,000 British prisoners of war carried on the rolls of Stalag VIII B which is located in a healthy area east of Dresden and near the Elbe River. There are also about 100 American prisoners at Stalag VIII B. It is probably the most complex camp in Germany, with over 8,000 men in the base camp and some 300 Arbeitskommandos (working detachments), ranging in individual strength from 30 to 100 hundred prisoners, and subject to the officer in charge of Stalag VIII B. The men in the Arbeitskommandos are engaged in coal, stone quarrying, road repairing, factory, agriculture, and laundry work. The report states, in part, to the steadily increasing size of the Stalag, more ranges of latrines have been necessary. The latrine center for refugees has been moved from the main camp, and is now in the large new and independent camp about a mile from the main camp.

When visited by a Delegate of the International Red Cross Committee in May it was reported that these camps housed only British prisoners. Later advices have indicated that there are now over 600 Americans in the Fukuoka camp. Prisoners in the camp are principally employed in coal mines and shipyards.

Fukuoka—Japan

Fukuoka camps, numbering seven in all, are situated at the western end of the main Japanese island of Honshu. The camps derive their names from the large city and province of Fukuoka located at the southern tip of the adjoining island of Kyushu, presumably because Fukuoka is the military headquarters of the region. Most of the camps are centered around the cities of Ube and Onine, but two camps are on small islands—Inunishima and Muko—In the Inland Sea about 150 miles east.

When visited by a Delegate of the International Red Cross Committee in May it was reported that these camps housed only British prisoners. Later advices have indicated that there are now over 600 Americans in the Fukuoka camp. Prisoners in the camp are principally employed in coal mines and shipyards.

Hakodate—Japan

Long Hakodate is the designation of a main camp and a divisional camp both located near the city of Hakodate at the southern extremity of the northern Japanese island of Haida. These camps were opened December 1, 1942. A Delegate of the International Red Cross Committee visited them in August, regarding about 60 Americans among the 600 prisoners in the two camps, from Java and Singapore. In the principal camp, prisoners are housed in one-story frame buildings, with wooden floors. In the divisional camp, newly constructed permanent wooden blockhouses with three floors are used. Prisoners working in a coke manufacturing plant, a machine plant, a mine,

A German prison camp in winter—Stalag VIII B. This is mostly a British camp, it contains American prisoners.

Polish Prisoners of War in Stalag VIII A send hearty greetings for Christmas and the New Year.

Messages from Philippines

Sixty-four cablegrams from prisoners of war, internees, and United States nationals in the Philippines were received by the Red Cross during the month of October for delivery to relatives and friends in this country. This was the largest number received in any one month from the Far East, as well as the largest number to arrive from United States internees and prisoners of war in any enemy-occupied country.

While communications from the Philippines have been trickling in through Red Cross communication service since last January, this is the first time personal messages from individuals have been received in any quantity. Many of the cables were replies to messages sent through Red Cross channels from persons in the United States.

It is hoped that this influx of communications from the Far East is indicative of a continued increase in the number of messages and welfare reports from that territory.

and also as mechanics and carpenters. The men work eight hours daily and have three days' rest a month. The report says they receive "standard pay with bonus up to 5 sen (1 cent) per day for qualified workers."

Mail for Japan

The International Red Cross Committee has been informed that the Japanese authorities have created a central post office for prisoners of war at Higashi Shinagawa—the main Tokyo camp. This post office is charged with the distribution and readdressing of mail to prisoners of war held by Japan, and its staff is composed of American and British officers. These officers, it is stated, have complained that insufficient address frequently makes it difficult, if not impossible, to locate the prisoners they are intended for, and the request is made that the utmost care should be taken in writing out the exact address on mail for prisoners of war in Japanese hands.

Filming Prisoners

Arrangements have been made, through the International Red Cross Committee, to make a film of American prisoners of war in some of the German camps. Similar pictures have been made, and sent to the United States by the I. R. C. C. of French, Belgian, and other prisoners, but the distribution of these has been held up pending the completion of arrangements for filming American prisoners.

When the film showing American prisoners reaches this country, every effort will be made by the Red Cross to arrange for its nation-wide exhibition.

Exchange of Prisoners

Under an agreement between the United States and Germany for the mutual repatriation of seriously sick and seriously wounded prisoners of war, 2 American officers and 12 enlisted men who had been prisoners in Germany were repatriated in the second half of October and returned to the United States by way of Sweden and England. Under a similar agreement between Great Britain and Germany, a mutual repatriation of sick and wounded prisoners from both sides took place.

This was the first repatriation of seriously sick and seriously wounded prisoners of war from Germany during the present war, and the procedure followed was that prescribed in the Geneva Prisoners of War Convention, Article 68, which provides that:

"Belligerents are bound to send back to their own country, regardless of rank or number, seriously sick and seriously injured prisoners of war, after having brought them to a condition where they can be transported. Agreements between belligerents shall accordingly settle as soon as possible the cases of invalidity or of sickness entailing direct repatriation."

Doctors, chaplains, and enlisted medical personnel who are not needed for the care of their fellow prisoners are also entitled to repatriation under the agreements and in accordance with the provisions of the Red Cross Convention. The non-combat forces in the October exchanges included all chaplains and medical personnel over and above two doctors, one chaplain, one dentist, and six enlisted personnel for each 1,000 men who continue to be held as prisoners of war. The ships carrying repatriated prisoners sail under safe conduct guarantees and carry neutral International Red Cross Delegates as observers.

Prison Camp Money

Prisoners of War Camp Money.

SCRIP GOOD FOR 1 REICHSMARK

This scrip is valid as legal tender for prisoners of war only, and may be spent by them or accepted only in the specially designated stores inside the prisoner of war camp or at the work camps.

The exchange of this scrip into legal tender can be made only at the authorized cashier's office of the camp administration. Violation, imitation, or counterfeiting will be punished.

The Chief of the German High Command.

By order

(Signature)

The negotiations for the exchanges began several months and their successful conclusion largely because of the unfailingly good operation of the Swiss government. The Swedish and Spanish authorities also gave ready cooperation. The ports of transfer, for various reasons, negotiations for the treatment of sick and wounded prisoners had to be handled with discretion, but it is expected further repatriation movements will be agreed upon from time to time with Germany.

Discussions have also taken place looking toward an exchange of seriously sick and seriously wounded American prisoners of war in Swiss hands, and exchanges of Americans and Japanese civilians in addition to the two that have already taken place. These discussions, not yet been concluded, but are having the close attention of the United States government.

Size of Next-of-Kin Parcels

The box or carton for the monthly parcel which the next-of-kin is allowed to send in the name of war is an important parcels package. It should be strong as the contents will be undamaged when they reach the man in arms after a long, hard trip. It should be light so that it will use no more than necessary of the permissible pounds. The usual corrugated board carton is recommended. War Department and the GPO Office.

As to the measurement, it should not be longer than 18 inches (in the other directions), to its length should not be less than 42". That is, with a box 18" long, if you took a tape and started at 38" to wrap it around the smaller girth, it should not be farther than 42" inches on the other side. If your box were less than 18", it could be somewhat larger. Thus for a box 12" in length, the other dimensions could be 6"x9". But if it is the same long, the other dimensions should not be more than 6"x6".

Matches are often found in parcels, according to a Department official, who has been called to his attention. Post Office. Families are asked that matches are not on the permitted list for packages sent to prisoners of war or internees.

Repatriates Arrive Home from Germany

Much information of interest to relatives of prisoners of war in Germany was obtained from talks which representatives of the American Red Cross have had with several of the 14 American prisoners (2 officers and 12 enlisted men) recently repatriated from Germany as unfit for further combat service. A summary of the men's statements is given below.

None of the repatriated flyers brought down in Germany was noticed by the civilian population, and, apparently, none of them actually met an Allied airman who had been seriously molested by German civilians.

If flyers are brought down unobserved in German-held territory, they do their utmost to evade capture and, with such help as they can obtain from sympathizers in the occupied countries, to get back to their bases. Some probably succeed. Even those who land unseen in Germany usually try to get away. For the most part, however, they are picked up promptly by the authorities and, if wounded, sent to the nearest hospital. If un wounded, they are immediately dispatched to Dologof, the main transit camp for areas, where they are given a number (which means that they are officially listed as prisoners of war) and then assigned to a "permanent" camp. The transit through Dologof takes about three weeks. No complaints were made of mistreatment of prisoners by the German authorities. Several of the repatriates who were in the hospital throughout their period of capture said they received the best of care and medical attention, although they would have felt the lack of nourishing food had it not been for Red Cross parcels.

They further said that other seriously wounded Americans hope to be repatriated soon.

Mail Delays

In the case of prisoners taken during operations in North Africa and later in Italy, long delays, and frequently much hardship, were experienced before the men reached German hospitals or prison camps. Many prisoners refrain from writing home until they can give their relatives a prisoner of war number and "permanent" camp address. The prisoners understand that about six months will elapse after they have a definite camp address and number before mail from home will begin to reach them.

Attempted escapes from camps are frequent, but, as a rule, the men do not succeed in keeping their regained liberty for long. Unless the escape has been well planned, they are generally picked up by the authorities in the nearest village or town and immediately returned to the camp to spend the next week or two in the guardhouse.

The men in the camps and hospitals are fully informed about their rights and obligations under the Geneva Prisoners of War Convention. The articles of the treaty, in several languages, are prominently posted in the main camps. Representatives of the Protecting Power (Switzerland), Delegates of the International Red Cross Committee, and neutral secretaries from the YMCA are also seen by the men on their visits to camps and hospitals. The camp spokesman (elected by the men) freely exercise their right to complain in private, if they have any complaints to make, to representatives of the Protecting Power, which is charged under the Convention with the duty of seeing that the Convention is properly observed.

Control Over Relief Supplies

The German authorities, in collaboration with the camp spokesmen, maintain strict control over relief supplies. Red Cross food parcels are locked in a storeroom which is opened jointly by the camp spokesman and the German camp commander.

The men may take out of their parcels whatever food, soap, or cigarettes they need for that day, after which the storeroom is again locked. The men usually prepare, and share, their relief food in groups. Whenever they take a can of food from their parcels, the camp authorities puncture it so that it must be eaten promptly. The main reason for this is to prevent prisoners hoarding canned food for use if they succeed in escaping.

The men were positive in stating that those in the camps could not maintain their health without Red Cross parcels; the rations supplied them by the Germans (consisting chiefly of black bread, potatoes, a poor quality of margarine, and a thin soup) were described as "quite insufficient." When asked how Russian prisoners in Germany, who receive no relief supplies from outside, manage to survive, the men were quick to explain that Russian prisoners do not benefit from the Geneva Convention but that in all camps where Russians are interned with other nationalities, the other prisoners form Russian Aid Committees which "salvage" left-over German rations, and also make contributions from their own relief supplies for the benefit of Russian prisoners. They even collect cigarette bands which the Russians remake into cigarettes, using whatever paper is obtainable.

Pay For Work

All privates who work are paid 70 Pfennige ($0.28 at the official pre-war rate of exchange) a day in Kriegsgefangenen-Lagerfeld. This is special prisoner of war currency (each "bank note" is about the size of a cigarette paper) can be spent only at camp canteens where there is, in fact, not much in the way of goods to select from. The articles purchased most frequently at canteens, when available, are matches, beer, razor blades, combs, mirrors, and tooth powder.

Nonommissioned officers are not required to, but they may volunteer for, work at the 70 Pfennige a day rate. The repatriates said, however, that British and American noncoms rarely volunteer.

There was complete agreement among the men interviewed that morale of the American prisoners in Germany was excellent, and that their high spirits and good humor were a constant joy to the prisoners of other nationalities who have now, for the most part, been "Kriegies" for several years and who have thus felt the full force of the boredom, privation, and monotony which are the inevitable consequences of POW life. The comradeship among Allied prisoners of all nationalities was also said to be very high. Solidarity was the one element conspicuously lacking in all prison camps and hospitals. Greek and Pole, Russian and British, Yugoslav and American, French and Dutch, colored and white, are comrades in misfortune who are united by one hope—getting back to their homes and families as quickly as possible.

Letters

(The following letters have been furnished to the American Red Cross by relatives. All prisoner of war mail is censored by the Detaining Power.)

Bucharest, Romania
August 15, 1943

Dear Mother and Dad,

Well, what do you all think about all this? I hope you didn't worry about me. We all are okay, though it was a little rough for awhile. At present I am spending a "little" free time in the hospital. Don't worry about me because I am fine, well, and dandy. Keep Ole Bob on the ball, and don't let him get any wild ideas. Hope everyone around home are well and happy. I'll be doggone if I'm not running out of things to say already. Anything you are allowed to send me I'll no doubt need. You can get full details from A. R. C. on everything. Say hello to everyone for me, and I'll write you all whenever I can. That's all for now. Be seeing you all—soon?

(Note: A recent cable from Geneva advises that most of the American airmen captured in the Ploesti raid are at Camp Ligerul Prisoneeri, No. 2, Sublegerul Timiș, Banat, Romania.)

Stalag Luft III
August 19, 1943

Dear Folks:

I hope that you folks are doing as well as I am. Santa Claus has visited me here and left three parcels. Friday I received the January 25 parcel and, as usual, wonder at the ability of my parents to know exactly what the young one needs. Nothing could have taken the place of a single article and nothing more could have been added for my comfort—it was a wonderful parcel. The March and May parcels were likewise complete and I can now ask for nothing more than some day to show my gratitude. If I should never receive another parcel, I will be well taken care of and the ones to come will be more than enough. I received the parcels in good shape and the shipping tags checked with the contained redemptions.

I received a letter from you today and one from Wally. I have received 40 letters since June 5 and most of them from you and Dot, dated up to April 9. The people at home are really swell to write and when I get a letter from you folks, I can forget my surroundings for a while. I manage to play a game of softball every day and we stir up quite a competition here in camp. There is nothing like keeping as fit as possible. (Note: A cartoon sent by Lieut. Leonard E. Hamaker, the writer of the above letter, to his family in California appears elsewhere in this issue.)

Stalag VII A
January 26, 1943

Dear Folks:

Well here are a couple more lines to let you know that I am still all right and in good health. I have been in Germany now for about five days. They treat us very good here. You are allowed to send packages. Inquire at the Red Cross and they

Communications to Prisoners

Cable service through Switzerland to American prisoners of war and civilian internees in enemy countries is limited under present conditions to emergency cases, such as the birth of a child in the prisoner's family. It has been found impracticable to send holiday greeting cables, and Red Cross chapters throughout the country have been so informed.

Those who communicate with prisoners in Europe should soon begin to notice a great improvement in postal communications. All the Philadelphia-Marseille-International Red Cross ships now carry regular prisoner of war mail, with sailings out of Philadelphia as often as three times a month.

Steps have also been taken by the Post Office to expedite the airmail service from this country to prisoners held in Europe. This service, in fact, now may be almost as rapid as cable service, when one considers that cables have to be relayed through several successive points and several censorship. Letter mail or airmail letters to prisoners in Europe pass through a single American (or Allied) censorship and one corresponding censorship in Germany.

All the mail aboard the Gripsholm which was transferred to the Teia Maru at Mormagao in mid-October should reach the addresses at most points in the Far East before Christmas.

will show you on a map just where I am and also just what you send. How is everything at home? We get the regular Red Cross cables once a week. There is real nice variety in them, including sugar, coffee, meat, crackers, beans and almost everything.

Zemun War Prison Camp
January 26, 1943

Dear Folks:

I will take advantage of the opportunity to write to you I have had for nearly a year. I wrote you letters last February while in Italy but thought that it ever got there. I hope that everyone is well and that everything is going smoothly home. I am anxious to know how Vincent is doing. I hope he is in better deal than I got. I sure wish I could be home to see the action and the changes the war has caused. I also to lap up some of the old Italian cooking. I hope the war has not caused you any hardship. I am sorry to say that I am unscratched as well. My experiences during the war were not too terrible and I was not exposed to much danger, being in the rear areas most of the time doing various kinds of engineering work. I was one of a large group of war prisoners moved to Japan by the P. I. last November. We quartered in large two-story barracks, sleep on mattresses with plenty of blankets and have plenty of room. There are English, Australian and New Zealand war prisoners turned here, also some American sailors and marines from Guadalcanal. These fellows have made us swell since we arrived here. They are all in good spirits, healthy & optimistic, and our morale has considerably since our association with them. We have received no articles, sewing kits, tobacco, some food from the American Canadian Red Cross. The Japanese army gave us overcoats and additional clothing to supplement our light tropical clothing. It gets cold here during the winter, temperature going below freezing. I hope to hear from you soon.

Camp 21, Isch
June 25, 1943

Dear Folks:

We're having a real hot day. It's usually cool inside the buildings. We get a picture show here once awhile now. They are old and

(Continued on page 12)

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. You stated in the July issue that the PRISONERS OF WAR BULLETIN could not be sent by relatives to American prisoners. Could I tell my son about it in a letter? He is a prisoner in Germany.

A. There would be no objection in writing your son about the BULLETIN.

In June I received word my son was missing and later that he had been reported a prisoner in Germany. We started writing him immediately, but have just had a letter from him dated August 29 saying he has had no mail. What has happened to all the letters we have sent him?

A. Three months is not an unusually long delay for letters going from this country to prison camps. Your son has very likely had part of his mail by now, though if he has been moved from one camp to another, so that it had to be forwarded, it might take still longer. It should be remembered that mail moving to the camps is subject to all the difficulties of wartime interruptions and transportation delays, and sometimes even to the destruction of trains through bombing. Prisoner of war mail is also censored in at least two, possibly three, countries.

I write my son once every three weeks, addressing him with his rank, name, U. S. A. Air Corps and serial number, interspersed by Japanese, formerly of Philippine Islands, c/o Japanese Red Cross, Tokyo, Japan, via New York, N. Y. Do you know whether he receives the mail often? If so, I would write oftener. Do you know how often the mail leaves U. S. Can you inform me as to the camp my son is in?

We are sorry we cannot give you a definite camp address for your son. Many men captured in the Philippines were reported by the Japanese as prisoners of war but without any camp address being given.

Regarding the mail situation, we cannot determine whether your son is receiving mail from you. But, although the mail is doubtless very slow, if it is typewritten and properly addressed, it should eventually reach him. We have heard of no restriction on the number of letters a prisoner may receive, and we would therefore encourage you to write regularly. We would refer you particularly to the information on this matter which was published on the last page of our October issue.

That report, incidentally, said that letters to prisoners of war held by Japan "must not be more than 25 words in length." It should have read "must be less than 25 words in length."

The Japanese government has announced that prisoners are allowed to write their families and friends, although no general ruling on the number of letters and postal cards they are permitted to send has yet been officially reported. Of course, you realize that, even under the most favorable circumstances, mail will take several months at least to reach the United States from prison camps in the Philippines.

Q. Can my son in a German prison camp exercise and send a power of attorney?

A. Since your son was in the arms, presumably, any award, if announced after he became a prisoner of war, would be sent to you (if you are his officially listed next of kin). If such an award were announced before capture, it would be assumed that the man had himself received it. The practice in the navy is somewhat different: All distinguished service awards are frozen during internment, and presumably awarded after repatriation.

Q. Is it possible to send books to a prisoner of war of the Japanese government in the Philippines?

A. No. Packages for the Far East from individuals are not being accepted at the present time. All the shipping space that can be arranged for is being used for sending the vital necessities needed by prisoners in the Far East, but these collective shipments include books and recreational equipment sent by the Y. M. C. A.

camps, and on the manner of payment. Until such agreements are reached, the following rules are to govern payment:

(a) Work done for the State shall be paid for in accordance with the rates in force for soldiers of the national army during the same work, or, if none exist, according to a rate in harmony with the work performed.

(b) When the work is done for the account of other public administrations, or for private persons, conditions shall be regulated by agreement with the military authority.

Q. May I send a Bible or a book made up of articles from the Reader's Digest to a prisoner of war in Europe?

A. A new Bible may be ordered sent from a book store or a publisher, with or without other books, to make up a 5-lb. package. If the prisoner has not been sent a book package within 30 days, if you could not send a book made up of clippings, since nothing but new books direct from the book seller may be sent.

Q. I believe my son should have been awarded a medal for his part in the action before he was taken prisoner in Germany. Would such an award be made to me, or sent to him?

A. Since your son was in the arms, presumably, any award, if announced after he became a prisoner of war, would be sent to you (if you are his officially listed next of kin). If such an award were announced before capture, it would be assumed that the man had himself received it. The practice in the navy is somewhat different: All distinguished service awards are frozen during internment, and presumably awarded after repatriation.

Q. Is it possible to send books to a prisoner of war of the Japanese government in the Philippines?

A. No. Packages for the Far East from individuals are not being accepted at the present time. All the shipping space that can be arranged for is being used for sending the vital necessities needed by prisoners in the Far East, but these collective shipments include books and recreational equipment sent by the Y. M. C. A.

Mail and Relief Supplies for German Camps

Mail and relief supplies for prisoners of war in Europe now go almost entirely from Philadelphia to Marseille in Swiss or Portuguese ships protected by safe-conduct guarantees from the belligerents concerned. From Marseille the goods are moved free of charge on French railways to Switzerland. When shipped direct to Marseille the goods usually reach Switzerland within 30 to 35 days after leaving Philadelphia.

Promptly after the ship docks at Marseille and the freight cars are drawn up alongside, the mail is unloaded. One steamer recently carried some 10,000 marks of letter mail and mess-of-kits packages, or enough mail for an entire train. The mail train, sealed and guarded by the French authorities, leaves the same night for Basel, Switzerland, and from there goes direct to the main German censorship and distribution center for prisoner of war mail at Stuttgart.

Prisoner's hope for 1944 at Oflag IV A/Z—to leave for home by plane.

The unloading of food packages, clothing, medicines, etc., follows at Marseille as rapidly as stevedores can be hired, the shipowners checked, and freight cars obtained. As in the case of mail, the supplies are loaded directly into freight cars—under the supervision of the French dock police, the German occupying authorities, and neutral representatives of the International Red Cross Committee. By unloading direct from ship to train, relief supplies are never left on the docks at Marseille. The cars are then sealed and leave for Switzerland as soon as complete trains are made up. Armed French guards travel on these trains as a protection against attempts at pilferage during the 24-hour journey from Marseille to the Franco-Swiss border, where they are taken charge of by the International Red Cross.

Prisoner of war relief supplies, the I.R.C.C. representatives report, are very rarely pilfered or tampered with during operations at Marseille and in transit through France. The French authorities cooperate in every way possible in getting these supplies promptly and safely into the hands of the Swiss, and the controls are so strict that pilfering is practically impossible. Before leaving the docks after a day's work is done, every stevedore and checker is rigorously searched by the police. Under French martial law which prevails at Marseille the death penalty or a sentence of many years at forced labor awaits anyone caught attempting to steal relief supplies. The Marseille newspapers recently reported that a dock worker was sentenced to six years forced labor for pilfering one pound of food.

The Red Cross News

In September, the American Red Cross began a news service for American prisoners of war and civilian internees held in European and Far Eastern camps. It is expected that this news letter, size 8½x11 inches of 8 pages at first but since increased to 12, printed on very thin paper, will be distributed regularly to the camps in Europe through the International Red Cross Committee at Geneva. It is called The Red Cross News and the aim is to publish once a month.

The purpose and contents of the news letter were explained in the following message from Norman L. Davis, Chairman of the American Red Cross, which was published on page one of the first issue:

This is the first issue of a bulletin of news from home which the American Red Cross hopes to send to United States prisoners of war as much regularly as is consistent with available transportation facilities.

The contents of this bulletin naturally be limited in character, deal with subjects which are connected with the war. During the course of time, we hope to provide information on many subjects which will be of special interest to you. News of American sports will be in each issue. Other facets of the way of life at home will be touched upon in each issue we will write of something that has happened in your home state.

In sending this publication to men and women in distant places we send greetings from the members of the American Red Cross. You are always in our thoughts, as well as those of your families and friends. Everything that can be done for your benefit and welfare in accordance with the Geneva Convention will be carried out by the American Red Cross. A bullet of news about your welfare, containing news of life in camps, is published by the American Red Cross and mailed monthly to families of all United States prisoners. I send good wishes to each of you.

One thousand copies of the first issue were prepared in time to go on the Grifinhof, for camps in Far East. Subsequent issues of news letters are being sent for distribution in the Far East as opportunities are available.

Extracts from Letters

Larry Allen, naval correspondent of the Associated Press, who was captured at Tobruk in September 1942, wrote on July 14, 1943, from Camp No. 21, Italy: "Your letters have been coming in a flood and I have just received those mailed as late as May 1. I have not received any of the packages yet, but things move slowly in wartime. These are busy days for work just as hard as if I were free. I'm translating songs into Italian."

An American B-17 reported as missing near Hamburg on July 26 was officially listed as a prisoner of war on August 8. During the week ending October 9 his family at Otis, Mass., received two letters from him at Stalag Luft III—one dated August 1, and the second, September 9.

From a Brooklyn, New York, master of war at the Mukden (Manchuria) Camp: "Came through the war in good shape. Arrived here November. Am well treated, clothed and fed here. Do not worry about me as the worst is over, and am in fair health now. Am mess officer of company here. Send me telegrams, letters, photographs and packages. Check with Red Cross regarding regulations. Looking forward to seeing you all soon."

(Note: It appears that cheerful items from prisoners in the Far East reflect at least as much the friendliness of the writers and solicitude for their families as the conditions under which they live.)

A reader in Abilene, Texas, writes that an American prisoner in Camp No. 2 in the Philippines has acknowledged a picture of his daughter, three letters, and a telegram from his family. He added that his health was excellent.

The following card was received on September 20, 1943, at Orleans, Indiana, from an American at the Mukden (Manchuria) Prisoner of War Camp: "I am a prisoner of war since April, 1942. I am well and hope to be home soon. We have our own doctors and everything is going along nicely. Guess I had better close, I'll say goodbye and send my love to all."

C. E. Burgess, R. S. M., spokesman

at Italian Camp No. 46, P. M. 3400, wrote on June 11, 1943: "On behalf of the American prisoners in this camp, I thank you very much indeed for the shipment of food parcels which are greatly appreciated."

Writing to his wife in England, a prisoner in Camp No. 63, Italy said: "You will find my sense of values has changed considerably when I come home. In fact, I think I will be much more tolerant and not quite so critical."

On April 1, 1943, an American officer at Zentsuji, Japan, wrote to his wife, who is with the Red Cross in Africa: "Three more months have passed by since my last letter, and each one past is a cause of genuine rejoicing for it brings me that much closer to you. During this time I received one letter from you, one from mother, and one from Beryl. Many thanks. That touch of home and friends means so much to us here. We really need nothing but your good, perhaps foolish, faith in us. Tommy and I are as healthy as ever—probably better—for we are doing a little work growing vegetables for the camp. The rest of the time seems to pass surprisingly fast for we keep busy with our classes, but time can't pass rapidly enough while you are so far away."

A prisoner of war in Stalag XX B wrote to his wife that he never realized before he had to do his own laundry what "a heart-breaking and back-breaking job being a washerwoman is."

Sergeant Gray, secretary of the New Zealand Society at Stalag 383,

Germany, wrote on June 6, 1943, to New Zealand House in London: "I feel that you would be interested in learning of a very touching example of comradeship in this camp. One of our men was recently very ill, and we were warned that he would probably not recover. While his illness was at its height, we were informed that a certain natural food tonic, two cans of which are contained in American food parcels, was of the greatest benefit to persons in his condition. With the permission of the Camp Spokesman, I discovered that eight of these parcels had arrived in this camp within the previous week. Sgt. Major G. T. Scobie and I approached all the men concerned, and after being acquainted with the position, they immediately gave the cans and refused to accept any payment whatever. Thanks to their generosity, the sick man has survived the most dangerous part of his illness and is well on the way to recovery."

Another version from Lt. Leonard Engess Hamaker, Stalag 383, Germany.

Change of Address

All next of kin officially listed for prisoners of war and civilian internees have the PRISONERS OR WAR BULLETIN addressed to them in the Office of the Provost Marshal General. The same address stencils are used for the mailing of information and parcel labels from that office. Therefore, if next of kin inform the Provost Marshal General, War Department, Washington, D. C., of changes of address, the BULLETIN, as well as official notices should reach them promptly. In advising of a change of address, next of kin should use the following form:

"I am officially listed as next of kin of Pfc. John Smith, prisoner of war No. 889 (or service serial number), held at Camp _____ Germany, or Camp _____ Japan. I have moved from _____ and wish all mail sent to me there."

If it is more convenient for next of kin, notice of change of address can be sent to the local Red Cross chapter.

Many names in addition to next of kin are on a separate Red Cross mailing list for the PRISONERS OR WAR BULLETIN. For those who are not next of kin, therefore, the following form should be used in advising the Red Cross (through the local chapter or by letter addressed to PRISONERS OR WAR BULLETIN, National Headquarters, American Red Cross, Washington 15, D. C.) of a change of address:

"I receive the PRISONERS OR WAR BULLETIN although I am not officially listed as next of kin of a prisoner of war. I have moved from _____ and with the BULLETIN sent to me there."

LETTERS

(Continued from page 8.)

sound track is in Italian. We get the same pictures as Christie, a little town near by. We're starting a new softball league next week. We have to make our own balls out of scraps but some very good ones are turned out. The game is our favorite pastime. We have some new fellows coming in this week. Maybe I'll know some of them. I'm still looking for my first letter. We're still getting news about strikes at home. I hope Roosevelt sticks to his promise to draft them if they refuse to return to work.

Oflag 64

August 5, 1943

Dear Mayme and Sam:

Well, I'm still getting along fairly well. Have received only two letters so far. It's hard to find something to write when you're cooped up like this. I'm studying a bit of Spanish and shorthand just to help pass the days and keep from being hungry all the time.

We haven't received any parcels or communication from the International Red Cross for two months, or ever since we have been at Oflag 64. Can you report that to the American Red Cross?

Haven't had so many dry since leaving the desert. Had hair clipped off again. My perm almost worse than my writing.

After this time of being up, I'm going to be the most abiding citizen you ever saw.

(Note: Several letters from prisoners at Oflag 64, complaining of the nonarrival of relief supplies, reached us. For a while this seemed to be the most difficult spot to reach American prisoners at. There appears to be no reason that these delays, in part, were not by bombing operations while planes were in transit across Germany during October, when 800 standard food packages, 500 parcels, and some medical supplies were delivered to the American officer at Oflag 64 on August 5. Also during August, standard food packages were shipped from Geneva to Oflag 64, while July a large shipment of sleeping bags, toilet, and comfort articles went from Geneva and should have been distributed in the camp during August.)

Published by the American National Red Cross for the Relatives of American Prisoners of War and Civilian Internees

NO. 1

WASHINGTON, D. C.

JANUARY 1944

THE UNIVERSITY
OF TEXAS
JAN 1 1944

THE LIBRARY

RISONERS OF WAR BULLETIN

Produced by the American National Red Cross for the Relatives of American Prisoners of War and Civilian Internees

American Airmen in Rumania

most of the American airmen, serving in all about 110 officers and noncommissioned officers, who faced the raid on the Ploesti oil fields last August and became prisoners of war in Rumania, are now in a "permanent" camp at Brasov, near Brasov, Brasov is an old town on the northern side of the Carpathian Mountains and before the 1919 peace settlement was a rail station in Hungary on the railroad to the old kingdom of Rumania.

These airmen, mostly suffering from burns, were wounded before capture, but almost all of them have recovered sufficiently to join their wounded comrades near Brasov, still convalescing in a hospital run by Rumania's foremost health care, and the summer residence of a royal family, on the southern side of the Carpathians. This hospital, now called the "Officers' Convalescent Home," belongs to the Rumanian Red Cross and is a converted hotel occupied at present only by American prisoners, the medical personnel, and Red Cross workers.

Within a few days of the raid a delegate of the International Committee of the Red Cross obtained permission to visit the wounded airmen in hospitals at Filipesti, Ploesti, and Sinaia. The one man at Filipesti was promptly moved to Sinaia, at the time of the delegate's report only one wounded man remained in the military hospital at Sinaia. Although progressing satisfactorily, he could not be moved.

The delegate spent a full day at the Sinaia hospital and saw the following meals served to the wounded prisoners, of whom all except 12 took their meals in the main dining room:

Breakfast:

Two pieces of bread, marmalade, tea.

Dinner:

White cheese, tomatoes, soup, meat, fritters, fruit.

Supper:

Macaroni and cheese, cabbage stuffed with meat, stewed fruit.

At noon each prisoner received half a bottle of beer and on Sundays half a bottle of wine.

All the wounded prisoners expressed satisfaction with the treatment they were receiving from the doctors, the Rumanian officials, and the Red Cross personnel. The surgeons looking after the patients, the report stated, were chosen from among the best in Rumania; the accommodations provided for the men were described as "luxurious." Not a single complaint was made, but desires were expressed for relief supplies, a shipment of food parcels, clothing, toilet articles, tobacco, and invalid parcels was sent promptly from Geneva and reached Rumania before the end of November. A second shipment left Geneva during November. The unbound prisoners in the camp at Timis will get a share of these relief supplies. The men there will need additional clothing, because winters in the Carpathians are usually severe. Arrangements have also been made so that

(Continued on page 7)

Convalescing American flyers, with International Red Cross delegate and Rumanian Red Cross nurses, in the hospital grounds at Sinaia.

Prisoners of War Bulletin

DECEMBER, 1943

Published by

The American National Red Cross
Washington 15, D. C.

Return Postage Guaranteed

See. 362 P. L. & R.

U. S. POSTAGE

PAID

Washington, D. C.

Permit No. 54

Serials Acquisition
The University of Texas Library
Austin 12 Texas

Postmaster—If addressee has removed and new address is known, notify sender on FORM 3343, postage for which is guaranteed.